Irving H. Leopold, professor and chair of ophthalmology at the School of Medicine, is an unusual yet convenient acronym comprising the first five initials of the World Organization of National Colleges, Academies, and Academic Associations of Pearls for Leaders in Academic Medicine:

This is a collection of concise bits of advice for medical school administrators on how to manage the challenges of playing a leadership role. The book covers topics ranging from how to negotiate the terms of a contract once you have accepted an administrative position to broaching difficult subjects like termination to managing budget crises. The authors have several years of experience as leaders in academic medicine, and each pearl is the product of their practice. From the reviews: This is a small pocket guide of succinct advice for physicians in leadership positions in academic medicine. Physicians and surgeons preparing for academic practice or anticipating a leadership role in academic practice are an appropriate audience.
